

Engineering Technology: Chair and Associate Professor/Full Professor for the Engineering Technology department at Miami University's College of Liberal Arts and Applied Science (Regional Campuses in Hamilton and Middletown, OH). The Chair & Associate Professor or Professor provides academic and administrative leadership and manages the work of the Department. The Chair and Associate Professor/Full Professor will supervise and manage the associate and baccalaureate programs in Engineering Technology; oversee all administrative, financial, and planning aspects of the department, including faculty and staff recruitment, workload assignment, and performance evaluations, and promotion and tenure evaluations; direct faculty and staff evaluations on a regular basis; monitor student learning outcomes, program assessment, and ABET/ETAC accreditation processes, as well as enrollment management; advocate for the department and serve as a key member of the college's senior leadership team; facilitate interdisciplinary collaborations to expand the department's research initiatives while maintaining a focus on teaching; represent the College of Liberal Arts and Applied Science (CLAAS) within the University and to the broader public; collaborate with the CLAAS Dean's office to enhance recruitment efforts for community college transfers and high school students; communicate university and divisional policies and procedures to departmental staff and faculty; develop and foster industrial partnerships and initiatives, and overseeing grant and contract activities. Additional chair responsibilities are outlined in the Miami University Policy Library.

The department comprises six full-time faculty members and approximately 300 undergraduate students. The department also secured funding from the Ohio Department of Higher Education, to establish state-of-the-art laboratories for robotics, electro-mechanical, electrical and computer engineering, and mechanical engineering. Strong connections with local industries in the Ohio southwest region have consistently enabled Engineering Technology faculty to secure externally funded research and teaching projects. More information can be found at <https://miamioh.edu/regionals/departments/engineering-technology/index.html>.

Engineering Technology is a growing and dynamic department offering a professionally rewarding opportunity for the right candidate. The department offers ABET/ETAC accredited bachelor's completion degree programs with concentrations in Electrical and Computer, Mechanical, and Electro-Mechanical Engineering Technology; and associate degree programs in Mechanical Engineering Technology and Electrical & Computer Engineering Technology. In addition, the department offers a new bachelor's completion degree in Robotics Engineering Technology. These programs are offered at local campuses and also offered as a distance-learning program to college partners across Ohio. The department is part of the College of Liberal Arts and Applied Science of Miami University and is based on Miami's open-admission regional campuses in Hamilton and Middletown, Ohio.
